

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING

Congress should reform the tax code to remove the comparatively favorable tax treatment of TPLF funders...By doing so Congress can crack down on the abusive practices of third-party litigation funding while generating revenue to use for pro-growth tax cuts."

Mike Palicz, Director of Tax Policy at Americans for Tax Reform (May 7, 2025)

We urge Congress to reform the tax code in the reconciliation bill to remove the favorable tax treatment afforded to TPLF funders and make them pay the same U.S. tax rate as the actual plaintiffs who are awarded money from any damages. It's a win-win-win for the American People, businesses, and economy."

American Consumer Institute-led coalition of 18 conservative organizations and thought leaders (May 19, 2025)

Sen. Tillis's bill doesn't stop lawsuits that hold corporate America accountable. It derails the gravy train that allows trial lawyers and hedge funds to profit off the legal system and use the proceeds to fund left-wing causes and the woke politicians that support them."

Ken Blackwell, American First Policy Institute (May 28, 2025)

Sen. Tillis is offering a common-sense solution that would discourage these foreign entities from using American courts to harm America. This is straightforward, conservative, and America First policy that protects hard-working American taxpayers."

- George Landrith, President of Frontiers of Freedom (May 29, 2025)

Steve Pociask, CEO of the American Consumer Institute (May 29, 2025)

@SenThomTillis bill protects U.S. legal system from foreign profiteering. This is a win for all Americans."

- Consumer Action for a Strong Economy (May 29, 2025)

Thankfully, Sen. Tillis has recently introduced a bill that would close this loophole and would do so without jeopardizing the ability of conservative groups to use the legal system to go after injustices and overreach in the government or corporate spheres. This is a no brainer for the GOP Congress and President Trump to end the tax-free syphoning of billions of dollars out of the US economy and into the pockets of foreign investors."

- Jim Carter, former Deputy Assistant Secretary at the Treasury Department (May 30, 2025)
